

Patti Ong Eppright, DDS

Dr. Patti Ong Eppright grew up in Dallas, Texas where she played basketball, swam, and cheered throughout high school. She then attended The University of Texas in Austin for her undergraduate studies and achieved a bachelor's degree in advertising with a minor in biology.

After her undergraduate studies, Patti attended New York University College of Dentistry for her D.D.S. degree. She graduated second in her class and was inducted into the Omicron Kappa Upsilon dental honor society for her academic achievements. It was in dental school where Patti met her future husband, Matt Eppright.

Patti continued her education at the University of Rochester, Eastman Institute for Oral Health, one of the top programs in the country, where she received her specialty training in orthodontics. After the completion of residency, Patti and Matt moved to Allentown, Pennsylvania where they joined a great practice as associate orthodontists for approximately three years. Although Pennsylvania was a great home for them over the last few years, Patti had fallen in love with Virginia during her many visits to see Matt during residency. Patti is very excited to be moving to Williamsburg and that she and Matt will get the chance to continue practicing together while raising their growing family.

During her free time, Patti enjoys spending time with Matt and their baby girl, Quinn. She also enjoys staying active by running, swimming, playing basketball, and tennis. She also enjoys cooking, photography and loves attending and watching almost any sporting event.
